Heinz, who occupied the box for the visitors. He is not, or was not, a regular member of the Roanoke team, but has been traveling with it in the dual capacity of newspiper correspondent and official scorer. He demonstrated this afternoon that he is right much of a ball-player, too, and may be he will also travel as a regular member of the club in the future. It is certain that he did better work than some other pitchers have done here this season. The Norfolk sluggers could make but seven hits off him.

IREAL ESTÂTE AND BUILDING NEWS

Business Sites in Demand and Down Town Property in Limelight.

Home Sites That Have

Activity in real estate continues without abatement, but the centering interest has changed somewhat from residence has changed somewhat from residence property to business sites and the eagle eyes of the agents, the speculators and the permanent investors are turned down town.

This does not mean that home builders have quit buying home sites or that speculators are overlooking West End, Lee District, suburban and other residence property, but merely that the many big deals for business property that are on the string are now occupying the more conspicuous place on the stage and holding this conspicuous place because of the larger amount of money invested and because that an active demand for business sites naturally means a great deal in an industrial sense. But buyers of residence sites are largely in evidence. One real estate firm reports the sala of 42 feet on west side of Park Street, between Hanover and Ivy Streets; 42 feet on the west side of Sycamore Street, between Hanover and Ivy Streets.

Megers. Pollard & Bagby, the real estate agents, who have been engineering the big deal in Seventeenth and Eighteenth Street property, report that they have acquired all the property in that locality they were looking for. They had an order from a customer, who is a capitalist, with much money, seeking investment, and to fill the order they have bought two blocks on Seventeenth and Bighteenth Street between Clay and Broad.

Bighteenth Street between Chay and Broad.

The capitalist, whose name Pollard & Bagby withhold for the present, has simply made an investment involving something like $500,000.

There are all sorts of gusses as to what he will do with the property, and in due time, he will probably announce his intentions. At present all that is absolutely known is that he will tear down the dilapidated buildings now on the ground and build houses of some kind that will be rent producers, but just what his plan is has not yet been divulged. Messra. Pollard & Hagby, his agents, have bought all the property their order book calls for and they are no longer in the market in that particular local-liv.

For more than forty years unusual care has been bestowed on the natural beauties of this place, and it certainly unites more advantages as a midway resort than can be found at any other railroad point between the North and the South.

America, like Europe, is realizing that a sudden transition between extremes of temperature is not wholesome, and pleasant pausing places are being increasingly called for.

Bix great railway systems now converge on this new double-track Link, and thousands of travelers pass daily, many of them describing filen Allen as the Deer Park, from the herds of deer which nom over its amble grounds, and which may be seen from the car windows for a mid of the stirring activities of the nex, clien Allen is simply unique. Twelve passenger trains stop at the Lodge gates daily, and yet close by are broad lawns and lakes and spacious parks and miles of virgin forest with graded drivways and rambles, which, sheltered largely by Southern pine, are mild and bainly even in winter days.

There are three mult deliveries, together with express, freight, telegraph and local and long-distance telephone service. The surrounding country is notable for its school-houses and elurrches, its good roads and low taxes, and there is not a bar-room or juli within six mice of the station.
